

Parliamentary Briefing Note

Proposal for a National Black and Mixed-Black Safeguarding Framework

Submitted for Parliamentary Consideration

Purpose

This briefing accompanies the attached proposal entitled "Proposal for a National Black and Mixed-Black Safeguarding Framework."

The proposal invites Parliament to consider whether existing policing and criminal justice safeguards should be strengthened through the introduction of written, measurable and independently auditable operational safeguarding standards for Black and Mixed-Black people.

It does not propose different legal rights or preferential treatment. Instead, it asks whether equal protection under the law can be strengthened through improved operational safeguards where credible evidence identifies persistent racial disparities.

The Central Question

The proposal asks one principal question:

If credible evidence demonstrates that Black and Mixed-Black people experience disproportionate exposure to identifiable policing risks, should Parliament consider introducing written, measurable and independently auditable operational safeguards designed to reduce those risks while maintaining equal protection under the law for everyone?

The proposal does not presume the answer. It invites Parliament to examine the available evidence before reaching its own conclusions.

Why This Proposal Has Been Prepared

For many years, Governments, Parliament, independent inquiries, inspectorates, oversight bodies and researchers have examined racial disparities within policing and the criminal justice system.

This proposal adopts a preventative safeguarding approach.

Rather than asking whether discrimination can be proved after an incident has occurred, it asks whether practical safeguards can be introduced beforehand to reduce foreseeable operational risks.

The proposal therefore applies principles already used throughout other areas of public administration, including healthcare, aviation, rail transport, workplace safety and child protection.

What the Proposal Recommends

The proposal recommends that Parliament consider:

- commissioning an independent review of existing safeguards;
 - developing a National Black and Mixed-Black Safeguarding Framework;
 - introducing written and measurable operational safeguarding standards;
 - strengthening evidence preservation procedures;
 - improving supervisory review of significant police incidents;
 - improving transparency and accountability;
 - introducing nationally consistent safeguarding reporting;
 - strengthening independent oversight and audit;
 - improving data collection and public reporting;
 - implementing any framework through consultation, pilot programmes and independent evaluation before any national rollout.

What the Proposal Does Not Seek

The proposal does not seek:

- different legal rights;
- preferential treatment;
- separate criminal laws;
- reduced accountability;
- immunity from lawful policing;
- assumptions that every disparity results from discrimination;
- assumptions that every police force is institutionally racist.

Instead, it seeks evidence-based consideration of whether operational safeguarding can be improved.

Why Parliamentary Consideration Is Requested

The proposal concludes that the question of whether additional operational safeguards are required is ultimately a matter for Parliament.

Parliament is invited to determine:

- whether existing safeguards are sufficient;
 - whether current safeguards are adequately documented and measurable;
 - whether they can be independently verified;
 - whether additional operational safeguards should be considered following consultation and evidence.

Proposal for a National Black and Mixed-Black Safeguarding Framework

A comprehensive policy proposal setting out the evidence, legal framework, operational safeguards, governance arrangements, implementation strategy and recommendations for Parliamentary consideration.

A handwritten signature in black ink. It features a large, loopy initial 'D' followed by a series of fluid, connected strokes that end in a long, sweeping horizontal line extending to the right.
